WOMEN FACE BREAK IN REPUBLICAN CLUB

New Constitution Offered During Absence of President.

In the absence of their president, Mrs. James Griswold Wentz, certain mem-bers of the Woman's Republican Club

In the absence of their president, Mrs. James Griswold Wentz, certain members of the Woman's Republican Clubhave drafted a new constitution which they hope to have adopted at the resular meeting Tuesday at the Hotel Plaza, if it is accepted it will cause a break in the organization of 500 women, say Mrs. Wentz's adherents.

The club leader, who has been spending the winter in St. Augustine, Fla., learned of the proposed action recently. She wrote to all the members urging them to vote against the changes to the constitution adopted last year. These letters were received yesterday by her friends and coworkers, many of whom have promised to rally to her support. When Mrs. Wentz left in the winter the club was in charge of Mrs. Charles H. Denlison, one of the vice-presidents.

The principal change proposed for the club is found in the list of standing committees, which, if the new constitution is adopted, would make the club more of a national political organization. It provides for a city, a State and a national committee, which have no place in the present order of things.

Mrs. Wentz, who has for many years headed the club, says in her appeal to the members that the revised constitution seeks to reorganize the club and in her opinion if carried out would rorganize the club and in her opinion if carried out would rorganize the club and in her opinion if carried out would rorganize the club and in her opinion if carried out would rorganize the club and in her opinion if carried out would rorganize the club and in her opinion if carried out would rorganize the club and in her opinion if carried out would rorganize the club and in her opinion if carried out would rorganize the club and in her opinion if carried out would rorganized the club, and in the committee, which have no place in the provides for a city, a State and a national committee, which have no place in the provides for a city, a State and a national committee, which have no place in the provides for a city a State and in the royal and the provides of
